II. Replies to the issues raised in the list of issues prior to reporting (CRC/C/LUX/QPR/5-6)

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 2 (a)

Involvement of children in armed conflict

3. The Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict adopted in New York on 25 May 2000 was approved pursuant to the Act of 25 April 2003.

Trafficking in persons

4. In October 2019, Luxembourg was one of 23 European countries that participated in the launch of a European Crime Prevention Network prevention campaign on human trafficking aimed at informing victims of their rights and the possibility of claiming them in all the member States of the European Union. One of the goals of the Luxembourg presidency of the Benelux Union was "to implement the declaration of intent signed on 2 December 2016, which sets out actions and measures to strengthen cooperation in the area of trafficking in persons".

Child prostitution

5. A strategy on prostitution was launched in June 2016. It is based on a holistic approach involving psychosocial, educational, oversight, preventive and legal measures. The strategy was put into action through the introduction of the first National Action Plan on Prostitution and the entry into force of the Act of 28 February 2018 on strengthening measures to combat the exploitation of prostitution, procuring and trafficking in human beings for sexual purposes.

Child pornography

6. With regard to combating child pornography, the website childprotection.lu was launched in 2014. The outcome of a joint project between the non-governmental organization (NGO) ECPAT International, the BEE SECURE platform, the Grand-Ducal police force and the judicial authorities, the website serves as a platform on which cases of sexual exploitation, child sex tourism, grooming and the publication of child sexual abuse images can be reported. As part of a joint initiative between the Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs and the NGO platform Le Cercle, a code of ethics is to be introduced in 2020 to prevent sexual abuse by development cooperation workers and employees and members of NGOs who travel abroad for their work.

Migration of children

7. The Act on the reception of applicants for international protection and temporary protection entered into force on 18 December 2015. It contains dedicated provisions on unaccompanied minors and ensures that their specific needs are taken into account and that their physical and mental health is protected.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 3

8. The National Plan for Sustainable Development was drawn up as the main instrument for the implementation of Agenda 2030 and incorporates the 17 Sustainable Development Goals. The Higher Council has involved young people aged 16–26 years who are resident in Luxembourg in the implementation of Agenda 2030 in order to raise their awareness of the topic.

9. Youth4planet has been active in Luxembourg since April 2018 with the financial support of the Ministry of the Environment, Climate and Sustainable Development.

10. Following the climate march that took place in the city of Luxembourg in 2019, the Government launched a constructive dialogue with the several thousand young people who had participated with a view to adopting measures to curb climate change. In May 2019, four ClimateXchange meetings were held, bringing together some 500 school students. In June 2019, a delegation from the National Pupil Conference of Luxembourg provided the Government with a summary report on this consultation process, which had been prepared by a group of participating students.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 4Reservations and legislation

11. The Government currently has no plans to withdraw the reservations entered to articles 3, 6, 7 and 15 of the Convention.

12. The proposed reform of the Constitution is geared towards ensuring that all children enjoy the protection, measures and care necessary for their well-being and development and can freely express their views on all matters affecting them. The Constitution aside, the best interests of the child are foregrounded in several other laws that provide for support and welfare measures to create a healthy environment for children. These include the Act of 29 August 2017 amending the amended Act of 16 June 2004 on the reorganization of the State Socio-educational Centre, bill No. 7236 establishing a children's rights defender and bill No. 7276 establishing a system for the protection of young people.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 5Comprehensive policy and strategy

13. The Government is currently planning to task the Department of Children's Rights of the Ministry of Education, Children and Youth with drafting, together with other ministries and civil society, a national action plan for the coordinated and coherent implementation of the Convention.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 6 (a)

Coordination

14. The National Children's Bureau established pursuant to the Act of 16 December 2008 is a public body under the authority of the Ministry of Education, Children and Youth. The Bureau acts as a one-stop referral point to which children and young adults in distress can turn for social and financial support.

15. Together with child and family support services, the Bureau provides support tailored to the needs of the child and/or family, where needed. Its mandate is established in articles 5 and 6 of the Child and Family Support Act of 16 December 2008.¹ Information on the financing of child and family social support measures can be found in the Grand-Ducal Regulation of 17 August 2011 detailing the financing of child and family social support measures.²

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 6 (b)

16. The National Children's Bureau is the body of the Ministry of Education, Children and Youth tasked with providing and financing support tailored to the needs of the family and the child, where needed.

17. The Department of Children's Rights is responsible for coordinating activities relating to the implementation of the Convention at the ministerial and governmental levels. It also participates in the work of international organizations in order to keep abreast of developments and good practices reported at the international level. There is no overlap between the functions of the Department and those of the National Children's Bureau.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 6 (c)

18. The Department of Children's Rights consists of two civil servants from the university sector and one administrative officer. The Department's operating costs are included under those of the Ministry of Education, Children and Youth.

19. The National Children's Bureau consists of 46 psychosocial support officers and 22 administrative officers. The Bureau's operating costs were €41,736,847 in 2010 and €122,254,732 in 2019 (an increase of 192.92 per cent).

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 7

Data collection

20. As Luxembourg has chosen to focus on improving the material situation of children by legislative and procedural means, it has lacked the capacity to undertake more intensive efforts to further diversify its data-collection practices. While it is true that statistics provide more accurate feedback on the effects of measures adopted, any energy spent on improving statistics is energy no longer available to develop measures to help improve the situation of children. Nevertheless, Luxembourg recognizes that there will be a need to make efforts on this front in years to come.

Independent monitoring

21. The Ministry of Education, Children and Youth has selected the members of the Ombuds-Comité fir d'Rechter vum Kand (Ombuds Committee on the Rights of the Child) since the Committee's establishment. Nevertheless, thanks to bill No. 7236,³ which was tabled on 25 January 2018 with the aim of establishing a children's rights defender to be known as the Ombudsman/fra fir Kanner a Jugendlecher (Ombudsman for Children and Young People), the selection and appointment of the children's rights defender will be made by the Grand Duke on the proposal of the Chamber of Deputies and no longer on the proposal of the Government (the bill in question was adopted by the Chamber of Deputies on 11 February 2020 and is due to be published in the Official Gazette shortly).

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 8 (b)

22. The bureau of the Ombuds Committee consists of a chair, a part-time (50 per cent) legal officer and a secretary. There will now be four additional posts in the Office of the Ombudsman for Children and Young People. The holders of these posts will be responsible for drafting opinions, processing applications and advice, managing complaints and implementing awareness-raising campaigns, and increasing the visibility of the Office.

23. The actual expenditure of the Ombuds Committee is set out in the table below.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 8 (c)

25. Once the Act establishing the Ombudsman for Children and Young People has entered into force, the Office of the Ombudsman will receive an overall funding envelope so that it can manage its finances independently.

26. The Ombudsman will then be required to issue an opinion on any legislative or regulatory initiative with an impact on respect for children's rights.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 9

Non-discrimination

27. The Ministry of the Family, Integration and the Greater Region and the National Reception Office have implemented action plans to combat discrimination, the first of which was published in November 2010 and was organized into four areas of action, including one devoted to combating discrimination. In the new National Integration Action Plan adopted in July 2018, the fight against discrimination, the promotion of diversity and equal opportunities have been integrated into all the areas of action.

28. Bill No. 6568, which was prepared by the Ministry of Justice, has yet to be enacted. The bill would eliminate the concepts of legitimate and illegitimate parentage. It would also introduce the principle that, to the extent possible, the child has the right to have access to his or her origins without being subjected to discrimination of any kind.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 10

Best interests of the child

29. Prosecutors and judges are made aware of the special needs of victims of crime, including through training on domestic violence, sexual violence, offences against minors, trafficking, procuring and organized crime.

30. In addition, all professionals working with children or young people are required to take a training course on children's rights at the National Teacher Training Institute. They also receive training on how to respond to new cases of sexual abuse.

31. With regard to the immigration of refugee minors, Luxembourg and the International Organization for Migration concluded an agreement whereby investigations are carried out in the country of origin of the unaccompanied minor's family so that a family assessment can be undertaken with a view to determining, inter alia, the best interests of the child. In addition, a committee has been set up to assess the best interests of unaccompanied minors in the context of decisions regarding their possible return to their countries of origin. A Grand-Ducal regulation is currently being prepared to establish the institutional structure of the committee.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 11 (a)

Respect for the views of the child

32. Every young person aged 14–24 years who lives and/or goes to school in Luxembourg can register to participate in the Youth Parliament.

33. The Youth Parliament operates under the Luxembourg National Youth Council. Its mandate is to promote the involvement of young people in our society and close the distance between them and the political world through the preparation of opinions and resolutions for transmission to the relevant political actors.

34. Each member of the Youth Parliament is informed about the various working commissions and joins at least one of them. In addition, each member begins his or her thematic work in these commissions. Each commission meets once or twice a month to work on its chosen theme, but its members can also work together via an online platform.

35. Lastly, during its summit in May or June, the Youth Parliament adopts its various opinions and resolutions, which are then deemed to be official. These opinions and resolutions are transmitted to the relevant political actors and are formally presented at a hearing before the Chamber of Deputies.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 11 (b)

36. Article 29 of the amended Act of 10 August 1992 on the protection of young people provides that, unless it is against their interests, minors who are capable of forming their own views are heard by the juvenile court. The court may excuse a minor from appearing at a hearing, order his or her withdrawal for all or part of the proceedings or hear him or her in chambers with only the lawyers for the parties present.

37. The child also has a right to be heard when the juvenile court is adopting a decision regarding his or her placement in accommodation, care or an education or school setting. Article 1 (5) of bill No. 7276 states that the minor must be heard before any decision concerning him or her is adopted, in accordance with his or her age, maturity and capacity for forming his or her own views.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 11 (c)

38. The National Teacher Training Institute runs a training course for education professionals on the rights of the child, which covers the child's right to be heard.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 11 (d)

39. Luxembourg has two national entities to help strengthen children's participation in law-making and policymaking, both of which are provided for in the Youth Act: the Higher Council for Youth and the Youth Parliament.

40. In schools, pupil committees and the National Pupil Conference of Luxembourg are the tools for promoting youth participation. The Conference is the platform for student representation at the national level. It may submit opinions and proposals to the Minister of Education on all matters relating to the lives of students and their work in secondary schools.

41. At the commune level, youth participation is promoted through the development of communal youth plans. In this context, youth centres play an important role, as they have close links with young people and can support them in their participation at the commune level.

42. Regular consultations are also held as part of the Structured Dialogue, which is a tool for the political participation of young people, enabling them to contribute to policymaking at the national and European levels. Set up in Luxembourg in 2013, the Structured Dialogue gives young people the opportunity to express their views on political decisions and allows the country's political players to hear them speak.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 12

Nationality

43. Luxembourg ratified the Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness and the European Convention on Nationality pursuant to the new Luxembourg Nationality Act of 8 March 2017. These principles were carried over and incorporated into the new Luxembourg Nationality Act. A child born to unmarried parents may acquire nationality if his or her filiation with parents who are nationals of Luxembourg is established.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 13

Right to identity

44. If enacted, bill No. 6568 reforming filiation would eliminate the concepts of legitimate and natural filiation. The bill would establish the principle of equality of filiation, do away with the concepts of legitimate and natural filiation and introduce the principle that, to the extent possible, the child has the right to have access to his or her origins.

45. This principle should apply to every child, irrespective of the manner in which his or her filiation is established. In this context, the Government has proposed adding an article 312 bis to the Civil Code, to read: “To the extent possible, the child has the right to have access to his or her origins. Such access has no effect on his or her civil status or filiation.” This principle also applies to adopted children and children born through medically assisted procreation involving gamete donation. The technical details will be set out in a separate bill, which is currently being drafted and should be tabled in 2020.

Right to privacy

46. The 2019–2020 work programme of the European Data Protection Board provides for the preparation of guidelines on children’s data, which are likely to address the legitimacy and proportionality of the collection of such data, the conditions of consent, the use of such data, limitations on their retention, and their dissemination and disclosure to third parties. The exchange and sharing of such data among public (and private) actors involved in the protection of minors in any way must therefore be in compliance with the basic principles of Regulation (EU) 2016/679 (General Data Protection Regulation,⁴ arts. 5–10), and such actors must comply with the general conditions of loyalty and transparency towards the persons concerned and implement appropriate measures to ensure confidentiality, purpose limitation and data security. Where appropriate, the formalities mentioned in chapter IV of the Regulation, including the requirement to carry out an impact assessment pursuant to articles 35 and 36, will apply.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 15

Corporal punishment

47. Under national law, corporal punishment is dealt with in the amended Act of 16 December 2008 on child support and in greater detail in article 401 bis of the Criminal Code.

48. Article 2 (3) of the amended Act of 16 December 2008 establishes the general principle that, “in families and school communities in particular, physical and sexual violence, intergenerational transgressions, inhuman or degrading treatment, and genital mutilation are prohibited”. The paragraph sets out this principle without providing for criminal penalties. Article 401 bis of the Criminal Code states that assault against a child aged under 14 years, excluding minor assault, is punishable by imprisonment for a term of 1–3 years and a fine.

49. In addition to the aforementioned provisions, articles 398 et seq. of the Criminal Code cover acts that constitute “wounding with intent to harm”, with the aggravating circumstance established in article 401 bis. An assessment will be carried out to determine whether the concept of “minor assault” should be reformed.

50. In schools, corporal punishment is prohibited under article 4 of the Grand-Ducal Regulation of 7 May 2009 on the rules of conduct and internal procedure common to all schools.

51. Together with private bodies co-financed by the State, the Department of Children’s Rights of the Ministry of Education, Children and Youth organizes awareness-raising activities for children and the general public. In this context, Children’s Rights Day is celebrated each year to promote the rights of the child. In 2019, the event was organized around the theme of corporal punishment. In the same year, two study days were held for professionals working with children. The first dealt with sexual abuse in the workplace and the second with corporal punishment.

52. Guidelines on the procedure to be followed by professionals in response to new cases of physical abuse against minors have also been drawn up with the cooperation of various ministries and disseminated to professionals who work with children.

⁴ Known as GDPR.

53. Lastly, the Eltereschoul (school for parents) promotes positive parenting by offering classes on positive parenting techniques to provide parents with disciplinary alternatives to corporal punishment.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 16 (a)

Abuse and neglect

54. Child and family support is provided for children and young adults in distress and for their families.

55. Psychosocial and educational support services are available at every secondary school and are accessible free of charge and without administrative barriers to all young people and their families. The number of social workers, graduate special education workers and psychologists in these services has increased from one position for every 340 students in 2009 to one position for every 300 students in 2019. In addition to their preventive activities, efforts to identify risk situations and psychosocial and educational interventions for young people and families, these officials work closely on the front line with the national psychosocial and medical network to carry out targeted interventions to protect young people.

56. With regard to technical resources, it should be mentioned that all professionals in the aforementioned services receive 10 days of annual in-service training on their respective areas of work with children and adolescents and on specific programmes of action. The in-service training provision also includes sessions to raise awareness of sexual violence against minors.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 16 (b)

57. In order to improve the detection of child abuse, the Ministry of Education, Children and Youth worked with other actors to develop guidelines on the procedures to be followed by professionals working with children and young people. Cases of abuse are to be reported to public prosecutor's offices, while cases of negligence are referred to the National Children's Bureau as a matter of priority. The Act of 16 December 2008 has led to improved provision of family support services.

58. The provision of family support, psychological counselling and psychomotor and speech therapy services has been significantly expanded to prevent the placement of children in care settings. Family-based interventions serve to strengthen the early detection of family problems and support parenthood. Intervention project coordination services have been networked throughout the country to create close links with families, social services and schools.

59. This allows all persons concerned to seek advice so that the appropriate services can take action in good time.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 17 (a)

Freedom of the child from all forms of violence

60. Following the entry into force of Act of 20 July 2018 approving the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence, two awareness-raising campaigns were launched, the first in December 2018 and the second in October 2019.

61. With regard to gender-based violence, the Criminal Code contains provisions, including articles 444 and 457-1, that establish aggravating circumstances in relation to certain offences.

62. With regard to violence in the family, the Act of 20 July 2018 establishes the obligation to provide support to any minor child who is a direct or indirect victim of domestic violence and strengthens the provisions of the amended Domestic Violence Act of 8

September 2003 relating to violence in the family. This obligatory support must be provided by specialized and accredited services for supporting child victims of domestic violence. In 2017, the Ministry of Equality between Women and Men accredited two psychological services for minors and young adults who are victims of violence: the psychological service for child and adolescent victims of domestic violence (S-PSYea) provided by Femmes en détresse (Women in Distress), a non-profit organization, and the Alternatives service provided by the Pro Familia Foundation.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 17 (b)

63. The Act of 16 July 2011 strengthened the rules governing children's rights through the approval of the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse (Lanzarote Convention) and the introduction of amendments to, inter alia, articles 372 (Indecent assault), 375, 376, 377 (Rape), 379, 379 bis and 380 (Exploitation of prostitution and procuring) of the Criminal Code. It thus covers:

- Preventive and protective measures
- Substantive criminal law
- Investigations, prosecutions and procedural law
- Support for victims
- Exchange of information

64. The Act of 21 February 2013 on combating sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children introduced more stringent penalties for the crimes of child prostitution and child pornography. If enacted, bill No. 7008 of 9 March 2018 strengthening efforts to combat the exploitation of prostitution, procuring and trafficking in persons for sexual purposes would make it an offence to solicit, accept or obtain sexual relations with a minor in exchange for remuneration or a promise of remuneration.

Initiatives to prevent violence against children on the Internet

65. Campaigns have been organized to raise awareness among the general public and professionals of the need to protect children from the dangers of using the Internet (a round table, a study day and a resource platform).

66. In 2018, in collaboration with ECPAT, the Department of Children's Rights of the Ministry of Education, Children and Youth launched a campaign to raise awareness of the dangers of using the Internet. The campaign was aimed at the general public and professionals and was supported by the publication of a specially created poster and an animated video.

67. Each year, BEE SECURE organizes approximately 1,000 awareness-raising sessions for children, young people, parents, teachers and special education workers. These sessions cover such topics as grooming, cyberbullying and sexting. In addition, BEE SECURE visits schools to provide age-appropriate training for children from the third year of elementary school (cycle 3.1) to the final year of secondary school. It also runs information evenings specifically for parents, under the title "Facebook: All in One", at which various social media issues are discussed.

National Action Plan

68. On 1 January 2019, the new National Action Plan on the Promotion of Emotional and Sexual Health entered into force. The Plan is intended to continue and consolidate the existing National Action Plan and to develop new alternatives, actions and strategies in step with the needs of the target group, actors on the ground and developments in society. These efforts to promote emotional and sexual health help to ensure the health and well-being of individuals, prevent and reduce the risks associated with sexual activity and protect individuals from all forms of violence.

Initiatives to support child victims of violence

69. The Ministry of Justice, public prosecutor's offices, the Ministry of Internal Security, the Criminal Investigation Directorate, the Ministry of Health and the Ombudsman for Children and Young People are working to establish a national child abuse resource centre modelled on multidisciplinary centres such as Barnahus centres or Child Advocacy Centres.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 17 (c)

70. Article 454 of the Criminal Code covers all forms of discrimination against individuals, including minors, on grounds of "origin, skin colour, sex, sexual orientation, sex reassignment ... or disability". This ordinary law provision also applies to the amended Domestic Violence Act of 2003.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 18

Harmful practices

71. The Act of 10 August 2018 on changes of sex designation and forename(s) in civil status records and amending the Civil Code introduced an administrative procedure for amending the sex marker in civil status records and the associated forename(s) in the event that a person does not identify with the sex marked in his or her birth certificate. This new legal framework is in compliance with the recommendations and resolutions of the Council of Ministers and the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe. It is based on the principles of "de-pathologization" and self-determination by the person concerned; it abolishes the requirement to submit a medical certificate in support of an application.

72. In this context, a day of awareness-raising and reflection was held in 2017 under the slogan "Towards a sector-wide strategy for inclusive education for lesbian, gay, bisexual, transsexual and intersex (LGBTI) persons". In 2018, a nationwide campaign on intersex issues was launched to raise public awareness of this natural variation of gendered characteristics and combat the discrimination that intersex persons sometimes experience.

73. The Familjen-Center consultation service provides consultations for intersex persons, including children, and their relatives.

74. On 13 July 2018, the Government adopted the first National Plan of Action to Promote the Rights of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender and Intersex Persons. The Plan has a dedicated chapter on the equal rights of intersex persons, which sets out 5 objectives and 18 specific actions, including the publication of leaflet for the (future) parents of intersex children and the provision of interdisciplinary consultations for intersex persons and their families. In addition, it provides for the implementation of other measures, such as a ban on non-emergency "sex normalizing" medical treatment without the free and informed consent of the intersex person and the preparation of a protocol on intersexuality and another on the provision of information prior to any requested medical treatment.

75. The Act of 27 June 2018 establishing the family court and reforming divorce and parental authority entered into force on 16 July 2018.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 19 (b)

76. The introduction of the Plan for Equality between Women and Men (2015–2018) shows the Government's commitment to promoting equality between men and women in all areas and at all levels of society. The Plan has led to changes, including in the areas of sexual and emotional education (17.b), prostitution (2.a) and parental leave.

77. The flexible parental leave system introduced under the reform that entered into force on 1 December 2016 has been a great success thanks to improved procedures and a significant increase in the parental leave allowance. The intended aims of balancing family and work life and ensuring equal opportunities have been achieved. The following table shows how the numbers of women and men taking parental leave have changed since 2009:

	Women (first period of leave)	Men (first period of leave)	Women (second period of leave)	Men (second period of leave)

78. The Prison Treff-Punkt Service runs two visiting programmes for children whose parents are in prison.

79. The Hand an Hand visiting programme allows children aged 6–17 years to spend time with their detained parents. The visits take place every 14 days (for one or two hours) and are conducted jointly with prison staff.

80. Children aged under 6 years can spend time with their detained parents under the Mam Petzi op Besuch visiting programme. Such visits are tailored to the age and needs of each child. The purpose of these weekly visits is to maintain or create a stable relationship between the child and the detained parent.

81. Regardless of any considerations relating to the creation or maintenance of a good relationship between the child and the detained parent, the best interests of the child remain the primary consideration in determining whether such visits are appropriate.

Children deprived of a family environment

82. Juvenile courts normally place the minor in the care of a person of trust, a foster family or an appropriate public or private institution.

83. Foster care is recognized as an essential measure within the child welfare system. In fact, among the different types of care for children or young adults in need, foster care represents an important child welfare resource for the State, enabling it not only to guarantee the best interests of the child and his or her right to grow up in a family environment but also to meet the Council of Europe recommendations in support of national policies that are oriented towards an approach promoting the deinstitutionalization of childcare.

84. Given the importance of strengthening the foster care system in Luxembourg, it is essential to come up with more attractive schemes in order to recruit more foster families. In this context, a survey was conducted among 148 approved foster families in 2013 with the aim of assessing real needs. The replies and results of this survey showed that it was necessary to review and adjust certain requirements for approval of social and family activity in a foster family. The changes introduced made it possible to restore some of the appeal of socio-educational care and thereby recruit new foster parents.

85. The following changes are expected to be made as part of the reform of child protection legislation.

86. When the minor is placed outside his or her family environment, his or her parents, guardian or persons having parental authority retain all the attributes of parental authority over him or her, except the right to determine the minor's place of residence.

87. In exceptional and duly substantiated circumstances, the juvenile court may decide to transfer parental authority, with the exception of the right to consent to the adoption or marriage of the minor.

88. In addition to the initial vetting process, the number and qualifications of staff are examined each year in a test to ensure that they are appropriate. Furthermore, the National Children's Bureau receives biannual reports on measures taken, which enables it to assess the efforts made by institutions to reintegrate children into families. The Ministry of Education, Children and Youth is currently developing a framework for quality assurance in the child welfare sector. This framework is being developed together with the social sector to establish, enhance and maintain a high level of quality in institutions.

89. With respect to the enforcement of judgments on the placement of children, the transport of children is generally carried out by the criminal police, who intervene in plain clothes and unmarked cars. In the past, however, in rare cases, transport has had to be carried out by uniformed police officers. The issue of whether the transport of children must necessarily be carried out by the police or whether another body may be given the responsibility for doing so is now being considered within the framework of discussions on reform of the legislation on the protection of children.

90. It is essential that children who leave care institutions with a view to leading an independent life receive personalized care if they are to fulfil their life plans. Such care is provided by the National Children's Bureau. In this context, the State takes care of rental costs and living expenses in order to facilitate the reintegration of these young persons into society. Since 2009, the development of the young people's housing sector has increased sharply. Thus, the number of available places has increased from 164 in 2014 to 296 in 2018.

91. As for children leaving a care institution to return to their families, they are entitled to family assistance.

Children with disabilities

92. In the interventions of the National Children's Bureau and the Ombuds Committee on the Rights of the Child, initiatives to promote and protect the rights of the child cover all children, regardless of their status.

93. In Luxembourg, all children are guaranteed an education pursuant to the Act of 6 February 2009 on compulsory school attendance, which requires all children between the ages of 4 and 16 to attend school, without distinction as to the child's state of health or degree of dependence.

94. Inclusive education for all children with disabilities is ensured pursuant to the Act of 20 July 2018 providing for the establishment of nine centres of expertise in educational psychology for inclusive education. This Act made it possible to introduce special measures for students with specific educational needs to enable them to exercise their right to education in the best possible conditions while directly promoting access for such students to the various levels of education on an equal basis with others, as required by the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

95. For students who cannot pursue a mainstream education, the law provides for measures at three levels: (1) at the local level, in schools – specialized teachers and steps to promote inclusion; (2) at the regional level, in regional departments – support teams for students with special or specific educational needs and school inclusion commissions; (3) at the national level, in a school or in a specialized centre.

96. To this end, all teachers and socio-educational staff in the schools have been adequately trained in the care for and inclusion of students with special needs. Within this framework, each primary and secondary school is called upon to set up an educational development plan, which, among other things, must deal with the training of students with specific needs.

97. The decision as to the type of schooling and care is left to the parents, and the care of children and students with specific or special needs is provided in consultation with the child welfare services and the education and care centres.

Extracurricular activities

98. Youth centres managed by the National Youth Service have also implemented measures to adapt various activities and programmes to the needs of young people with disabilities and inclusive groups. In the context of non-formal education, cultural institutions are supported by the Ministry of Culture in caring for children with disabilities through the provision of specific training.

99. When assessing specific needs, particular attention is paid to the students' personal situations. Thus, whenever possible, the students collaborate with professionals in establishing the diagnosis and take an active role in determining reasonable accommodation and other measures that need to be put in place.

100. There are many measures to support families with children with disabilities, some of which are described below.

Specialized Parenthood Counselling and Support Service

101. The Service receives financial assistance from the Ministry of Education, Children and Youth. It is intended for young people with disabilities under the age of 27 and their families. In addition, it offers its services to professionals working with children or parents with disabilities and their families.

102. Children and parents have access to support services, parenting support and psychological counselling. As regards professionals, the Service provides counselling and support services to outpatient and inpatient service providers in situations involving support for children or parents with disabilities and their families.

Long-term care insurance

103. The legislation on long-term care insurance provides a benefit for persons with disabilities to help with household chores. However, such insurance is provided only if the need for help is more than 3.5 hours per week.

Special supplementary allowance

104. The special supplementary allowance is a benefit intended to compensate for the additional expenses arising from a child's disability. This benefit is paid monthly and is granted in addition to the family allowance.

Leave for family reasons

105. Leave for family reasons enables parents of children under the age of 18 to remain at their children's bedside in the event of serious illness, accident or any other health reason, without loss of pay. The duration of this leave can vary between 5 and 18 days per child. If the parents are recipients of the special supplementary allowance for children with disabilities, the duration of leave for family reasons is doubled for all age groups.

Parental leave

106. Parental leave is leave from work dedicated to the upbringing of children, which may last from 4 to 20 months, depending on the model of parental leave chosen. During this period, the parent concerned receives a replacement income, calculated on the basis of his or her occupational earnings.

Childcare service voucher

107. Childcare vouchers are a benefit in kind that give parents reduced rates for education and care services in the area of non-formal education. They can also be used in childcare centres, day nurseries and daytime activity services.

Childcare centres

108. Childcare centres provide care for children and adolescents outside school hours. They also accommodate children with disabilities in an inclusive manner.

Daytime activity services

109. Daytime activity services offer educational and vocational training activities for persons with disabilities. They also accommodate school-age children with disabilities during school holidays.

110. To date, there have been no recorded cases of forced sterilization of a child with disabilities in Luxembourg.

Health care and health services

111. In terms of addressing the issues of excess body weight, obesity and tobacco, alcohol and drug use among children, a course entitled "Life and Society" has been introduced into the school curriculum to raise students' awareness about the importance of a healthy and balanced lifestyle, healthy nutrition and personal hygiene.

112. Alongside weekly physical education courses, each school organizes an annual sports day, with the aim of promoting an active and healthy way of life to change sedentary lifestyles and unhealthy eating habits. Interministerial awareness-raising projects, which are intended for the entire population, such as the “Gesond iessen, Méi bewegen” (Eat Healthy and Move More) project, lie within the framework of these efforts. The “Bewegte Schule” pilot project was launched in 2014 along similar lines. The aim of this project is to improve children’s health and cognitive skills through daily physical activities lasting from 15 to 20 minutes in classrooms and childcare centres.

113. The Luxembourg League for Prevention and Health and Social Welfare Action is tasked with looking after the health and social welfare of children. It mainly conducts regular health check-ups in elementary schools. Through its various health promotion and social action activities, the League participates in raising awareness among students of all ages and in promoting the healthy development of the child (balanced lifestyle, prevention of alcohol, tobacco and drug use and abuse, etc.).

114. The police introduce to students in the sixth year of elementary school (cycle 4.2) a prevention programme to inform them about the risks of drugs and narcotics.

115. A National Suicide Prevention Plan 2015–2019 has been put in place. A suicide intervention guide was developed in 2017 for use by schools in their efforts to prevent suicides and provide support for family and friends after a suicide.

116. A working group is now drawing up a new plan in collaboration with the various partners in the field after evaluating the actions that have been carried out.

117. The in-service training available to teachers and educational and psychosocial support staff includes a range of courses that focus on the well-being of children and adolescents. The training courses can be considered as primary prevention before a general health problem is diagnosed.

118. Training courses on support for students with specific needs are provided mainly for the specialist staff of the support teams for students with special or specific educational needs. The training has enabled staff to make specific diagnoses and take action when they identify a problem.

119. On 26 July 2019, the Government Council of Luxembourg endorsed a bill to amend articles L.234-51, L.234-52, L.551-2, L.551-5 and L.552-1 of the Labour Code, which was then tabled in the Chamber of Deputies.

120. The bill introduces changes to the scheme for leave for family reasons, fundamentally modified by the Act of 15 December 2017, which provides for up to 35 days’ leave for family reasons for every salaried employee with a dependent child, covering three different age brackets.

121. For parents of children aged between 13 and 18 years, this leave had been increased to five days if the child was hospitalized; although the leave could be split between the parents, they could not both use it at the same time. However, it has been shown that those conditions can create situations that are unfair and extremely difficult to manage for parents of children with serious illnesses or very severe disabilities. Thus, in order to take account of the specific needs of seriously ill children or children with disabilities, the bill aims to enable both parents to take leave for family reasons at the same time.

Environmental health

122. With regard to air quality, Luxembourg does not distinguish between the general population and children, with the exception of alerts concerning fine particulate matter and tropospheric ozone. A distinction is made between the “population” and “susceptible persons” when it comes to precautions and advice on how to act. Susceptible persons include older persons, children and persons with respiratory and heart problems.

123. The strategy of the common compensation fund for the general pension scheme was modified in 2017 to incorporate various measures that give effect to the Government’s determination to make more socially responsible and environmentally sustainable investments. These measures aim, among other things, to take into account the commitments made by Luxembourg under the Paris Agreement and the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. Examples include the creation of two new sub-funds specifically dedicated to achieving a positive environmental impact – the first is composed exclusively of green bonds and the second will invest purely in listed companies that intend to create an environmental social impact in addition to a financial return – or the obligation for each bidding company that submits offers in response to calls for tenders to implement an investment strategy based on environmental, social and corporate governance (ESG) criteria (qualifying for socially responsible investment certification).

Standard of living

124. Several activities, as outlined below, have been undertaken to combat multidimensional poverty and the social exclusion of children.

Reform of social inclusion income legislation

125. The guaranteed minimum income scheme was reformed pursuant to the Social Inclusion Income Act of 28 July 2018, which came into force on 1 January 2019 and thereby replaced the guaranteed minimum income scheme. The Act lays out four objectives, one of which is primarily focused on action against poverty among children and single-parent families.

126. Thanks to this law, persons facing the greatest barriers to joining the labour market are entitled to participate in social and work-related activity schemes tailored to their needs and skills.

Family benefits in Luxembourg

127. Following the entry into force of the Act of 23 July 2016, the former National Family Benefits Fund has changed its name to the Children’s Future Fund. The Fund is responsible for the management and payment of all family benefits and parental leave allowances in Luxembourg, and its budget amounts to almost €1.2 billion. It thus manages the payment of the following family benefits:

- The birth grant, which is paid to women who have received regular medical supervision and monitoring, in the form of mandatory check-ups with medical certificates issued, during their pregnancy, at the time of the birth and until their child’s second birthday. The grant, which is divided into three instalments, amounts to €1,740.09.
- The children’s future allowance, which is payable from the month in which the child is born until his or her eighteenth birthday, except where he or she pursues secondary education, where the right to an allowance is maintained until the age of 25. The amount of this allowance is set at €265 per child per month and increases by €20 per month for each child from the month in which he or she reaches the age of 6 years, and by €50 for each child from the month in which he or she reaches the age of 12 years.

- The back-to-school allowance is paid in August each year for children aged 6 years and over and who are enrolled in primary education. This allowance amounts to €115 for a child over the age of 6 and €235 for a child over the age of 12.
- The special supplementary allowance for children with disabilities is a benefit intended to compensate for the additional expenses arising from the child's disability. Under certain conditions, this allowance can be granted in addition to the family allowance and amounts to €200 per month.
- Social assistance, which is granted to any person in need residing in the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg. It provides access to goods and services adapted to a person's particular circumstances in order to help him or her acquire or maintain independence. Assistance may be palliative, curative or preventive and has a subsidiary role as a complement to other social assistance measures and to the financial benefits provided under other laws and regulations, which applicants for social assistance must first exhaust.
- Food distribution services provide food and everyday products to people in precarious situations, in exchange for a small financial contribution. In addition to the standard range, nine vital commodities are distributed free of charge thanks to the Fund for European Aid to the Most Deprived.
- Childcare service vouchers, which allow parents to benefit, depending on their income, from reduced rates or even free hours in childcare facilities.
- Rental subsidy, which, since 1 January 2016, provides housing assistance in the form of a rental subsidy to low-income households. The amount varies depending on the income and structure of the household.

128. Since 1 January 2013, people who lack financial security may apply for direct payment for medical treatment at their local welfare office. The direct payment system is designed to facilitate access to medical and dental care for those in difficult financial and social situations by exempting them from having to make out-of-pocket payments and then claim a partial reimbursement.

129. The tax reform, enacted on 1 January 2017, allows single-parent families to apply for an increase in the tax allowance for external assistance with childcare.

Education

130. The following provisions have been made to reduce inequalities in access to education, in particular by offering children support with homework and encouraging them to participate in free extracurricular activities, including activities organized by the National Youth Service.

Support with homework

131. Elementary and secondary schools have been providing homework assistance to students for many years. The provision of such assistance is formally established in laws, including articles 6 and 7 of the Act of 6 February 2009 on the organization of elementary education and the Grand-Ducal Regulation of 16 March 2012 (a) implementing article 16 of the Act of 6 February 2009 on the organization of elementary education relating to the supervision of extracurricular activities and (b) amending the Grand-Ducal Regulation of 17 December 2010 concerning accident insurance within the framework of early, preschool, school and university education.

Extracurricular holiday camp activities

132. Extracurricular activities are organized under both the elementary and the secondary education systems.

133. In the elementary system, the supervision of extracurricular activities is guaranteed by the school or a State-approved socio-educational institution.

134. In the secondary system, school projects can be drawn up by the schools concerned (the teaching staff, socio-educational service or student council) in line with the school's own objectives. The aim is to organize extracurricular activities, particularly cultural and sporting activities. Educational projects are decided on by the Minister of National Education, Children and Youth and are subject to an assessment.

135. Participation in extracurricular activities is voluntary. However, once enrolled, students must attend the activity regularly.

136. As regards funding, the cost of extracurricular activities is subsidized by grants for low-income households (with the reduction depending on income and ranging from 10 per cent to 75 per cent). These grants are earmarked for the purchase of school materials and helping to defray the costs of extracurricular and school-related activities. Furthermore, applicants for international protection are entitled to attend holiday camps free of charge.

Free public transport

137. Since 1 September 2013, young people under the age of 20 have free access to the public transport network. It is also important to note that all public transport is free as of 1 March 2020.

Free textbooks

138. Since the start of the 2018/19 school year, compulsory textbooks have been free of charge for children in all categories of education.

139. Since the 2016/17 academic year, parents of children under the age of 14 may obtain a refund of the registration fee if necessary.

140. In October 2017, a multilingual education programme was introduced in day nurseries for children aged 1 to 4 years to promote children's early and daily contact with Luxembourgish and French and support them in their language development.

141. The languages of instruction in elementary education are Luxembourgish, French and German. Given that schooling for pupils is mainly in German during elementary education, Luxembourg is making greater efforts to support new arrivals from non-German-speaking countries through the provision of newcomer classes.

142. Since the same language difficulties can occur in secondary education, secondary school students can also benefit from newcomer and integration classes, special purpose classes and specialized classes. These classes offer intensive instruction in French or German or Luxembourgish, depending on the gaps in the student's knowledge, and courses in the other subjects on the syllabus of the lower classes of general secondary education.

143. Consequently, newcomer and integration classes and international classes are made available to children who do not have a sufficient command of the languages to be able to keep up with the elementary or secondary curricula and students who have just arrived in the country, with a view to supporting the development of their language skills so that they can subsequently be integrated into mainstream classes in accordance with their technical and vocational abilities.

144. In order to put an end to violence in the school environment, projects to encourage cooperation and a greater social mix have been set up in various elementary schools. The Faustlos programme, for example, was introduced with the aim of preventing violence in schools and training young people to manage their emotions peacefully.

145. A school development plan has been put in place to meet the challenges of the school population in Luxembourg. The plan involves a joint approach by the school community aimed at addressing the local specificities of schools and their needs. For example, it is worth noting that many schools have decided to include the issue of school violence and ways of dealing with it in their school development plans.

146. In addition to intervention measures in cases of conflict or bullying (psychological harassment), educational policies focus essentially on a preventive strategy that promotes well-being in schools. A lasting and beneficial effect on addictive behaviour and school dropout rates, support for emotional and social skills development and the promotion of good school environments are common denominators of the following measures: Coolnesstraining; Peermediation; Meng Klass – en Team; Klassenklima erfassen und verbessern; stressless@school; Interventions en Education et Psychologie positives; Positiven Psychologie; Young and Strong; and others.

147. Generally, all the activities carried out by the socio-educational services and the psychosocial and educational support service under their terms of reference promote well-being and mental health and thus reduce violence. Examples include counselling and support services, inclusion and social equity measures and the development of a culture of participation among young people.

Rest, play, leisure, recreation and cultural and artistic activities

148. The time spent on compulsory schooling for children in the elementary education system varies between 26 and 28 hours. During their free time, children have access to a wide range of cultural and sporting activities, for example those offered by the “Art à l’école” (art at school) association, the MUSEP (musical education in elementary education) association and LASEP (the league of elementary education sporting associations) or as part of a supervised extracurricular activities plan. Under these plans, students have guaranteed access to the documentary, cultural and sporting resources they need for their development, are supported in their learning and helped with their emotional and social development. Supervised extracurricular activities are organized for students in elementary education.

149. Cultural institutions also provide extracurricular activities, offering programmes that are accessible to all and inclusive in their educational approach, communication and financial cost.

150. In addition, youth centres and many other youth organizations have qualified staff and offer voluntary activities for young persons aged between 12 and 26 years.

Asylum-seeking, refugee and migrant children

151. No asylum-seeking children are placed in detention in Luxembourg. On the contrary, during the reception of applicants for international protection, particular care is taken to consider the specific needs of vulnerable persons, including minors, unaccompanied minors, pregnant women and lone parents accompanied by minor children.

152. The amended Act of 29 August 2008 on the free movement of persons and immigration provides that removal decisions may not be taken in respect of minors who are not accompanied by a legal representative, with the exception of decisions based on serious grounds of public security, unless the removal is in the minor’s interests. Any unaccompanied minors, whether they are applicants for international protection or are in an irregular situation, are given free assistance by ad hoc administrators, who are generally lawyers.

153. Moreover, there are three shelters for unaccompanied minors, where minors may stay regardless of their legal situation.

Reply to the issue raised in paragraph 27 (c)

154. To guarantee the best interests of the child, the Act of 18 December 2015 provides that all asylum-seeking minors are provided with an ad hoc administrator, who will be responsible for assisting them and representing them throughout the procedure. Upon arrival, unaccompanied minors are given a leaflet in an appropriate language containing all the information on the procedure to be followed. Lately, young refugees have also been able to obtain this information through a video on the website of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. When an application for international protection is lodged, minors receive all the necessary information on their rights and obligations in the presence of their ad hoc administrator. The ad hoc administrator and the minors are informed of any decisions made and are always invited together to attend interviews related to the procedure, including before the committee responsible for assessing the best interests of the child.

155. All necessary measures are taken to expedite processing for the asylum applications of unaccompanied minors while respecting the guarantees enjoyed by these vulnerable persons.

156. Regular communication also takes place among the entities in contact with the child, in particular the Directorate of Immigration of the Ministry of Foreign and European Affairs, the ad hoc administrator and the shelter where the minor is living.

157. As regards reception conditions, shelters for unaccompanied minors are subject to the same regulations as children's homes for residents. This means that, under article 21 of the Act of 18 December 2015, unaccompanied minors must be housed in accommodation that is specially adapted for children.

158. The amended Act of 29 August 2008 on the free movement of persons and immigration provides for the right of reunification for the nuclear family and the possibility (subject to conditions) of requesting reunification with other family members, as provided for in Council Directive 2003/86/EC on the right to family reunification. Moreover, an authorization to stay for personal reasons may be granted to third country nationals who do not meet the conditions for family reunification but whose personal or family connections, which are assessed according to criteria including strength, duration and stability, are such that refusal of the person's stay would constitute a violation of his or her right to respect for private and family life that was disproportionate with respect to the reasons for the refusal. The legal time limit for processing an application is nine months, which may only be extended in exceptional circumstances. In fact, the nine-month deadline is usually met.

159. There is no deadline for the submission of a request for family reunification. However, if a beneficiary of international protection does not lodge the request within three months of being notified of the granting of international protection, the sponsor must meet certain conditions (resources, housing). Under the Government's coalition agreement for 2018–2023, it is planned to extend this period to six months.

160. The reception conditions for applicants for international protection include specific support for unaccompanied minors.

161. Child applicants for international protection aged between 4 and 16 years are obliged to attend school regardless of their parents' status. Applicants for international protection outside the age bracket for compulsory schooling have the right to education on an equal footing with other students resident in Luxembourg.

162. The Ministry of Culture supports cultural institutions to accommodate newly arrived children through training courses on plain language, the establishment of targeted projects with social and cultural associations and the development of the Kulturpass network and its visibility among families.

164. All unaccompanied minors are entitled to be heard by the members of the committee responsible for assessing the best interests of the child. The ad hoc administrator and the unaccompanied minor are invited to each meeting of this committee. The unaccompanied minor may request a full copy of his or her administrative file at any time.

165. Under the draft Grand-Ducal Regulation being prepared for the purpose of establishing the institutional structure of this committee, the Ombudsman for Children and Young People will be entitled to attend the committee's meetings as an observer and to consult a minor's file, subject to the young person's consent.

167. The amended Act of 10 August 1992 applies to all children in Luxembourg, including unaccompanied minors. However, it does not provide for any special status for unaccompanied minors. Notwithstanding that, the different ministries concerned consider it advisable to elaborate on that status, in particular as regards the appointment of an ad hoc administrator, beyond the few provisions that currently define the status of unaccompanied minor, namely the amended Act of 29 August 2008 on the free movement of persons and immigration and the Act of 18 December 2015 on international protection and temporary protection.

176. Article 11 of the amended Act of 16 June 2004 on the reorganization of the State Socio-educational Centre, amended by the Act of 29 August 2017, provides for the possible extension of a secure unit placement order, which may not exceed three months and requires a formal decision by the judicial authorities.

177. Several steps have been taken to implement the previous recommendations.

178. Improvements have been made with respect to the matters raised in the "Dissemination, awareness-raising and training" section of CRC/C/OPSC/LUX/CO/1. Training courses on subjects falling under the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography are now offered to government personnel and guidelines are disseminated to all professionals working with children, as specified in paragraphs 15 and 17 of the present report.

179. As regards "Existing criminal or penal laws and regulations", the Act of 28 February 2018 on strengthening measures to combat the exploitation of prostitution, procuring and trafficking in human beings for sexual purposes provides for the Prostitution Platform to be set up as a standing committee and establishes the seeking, accepting or obtaining of sexual relations with a minor in exchange for payment or a promise of payment as a criminal offence, thereby protecting minors.

180. Better procedural safeguards have also been introduced. Pursuant to article 3–7 (3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, introduced by the Act of 8 March 2017 on the Strengthening of Procedural Guarantees in Criminal Cases, if the age of the victim is uncertain and there is reason to believe that the victim is a child, he or she is presumed to be a child. This provision is of general application and includes victims of trafficking in persons.

181. With respect to “Child sex tourism”, the fight against child pornography has been stepped up through the childprotection.lu website, which was launched in 2014. This website is a reporting platform for any incident related to the sexual exploitation of children, primarily for cases of child sex tourism, grooming and the dissemination of child sexual abuse images.

182. Childcare service vouchers

210. The State contributes to the cost of childcare through the childcare service voucher system. This allows parents, depending on their income, to pay lower rates or even obtain free hours of care at childcare facilities. Childcare service vouchers are aimed at families with children under the age of 12 years or still enrolled in elementary education (on the condition that their parents are resident in Luxembourg or that at least one of the non-resident parents works in Luxembourg and is a European Union national).

211. The State makes a financial contribution to the costs for 60 hours of childcare per week.

212. Private childcare facilities and parental assistants may set their own hourly rates. However, any amount in excess of the maximum rate set by the State is payable by the parents.

213. In December 2018, more than 49,157 children resident in the country received financial assistance from the State through the childcare service vouchers. That amounts to 58.2 per cent of resident children in Luxembourg eligible for the vouchers (0–12 years), of whom 29 per cent are not in school and 71 per cent are in school.

234. In 2019, the poverty rate among children under the age of 18 years stood at 22.7 per cent (23.8 per cent for girls and 22 per cent for boys).

235. The severe material deprivation rate is 1.3 per cent (source: European Union statistics on income and living conditions (EU-SILC) – 1.2 per cent for men and 1.3 per cent for women), which is one of the lowest rates in the European Union.⁶

236. Social services in kind (such as service vouchers) are not reflected in the at-risk-of-poverty rate, even though such services have a significant impact on the living standards of households. An analysis of the impact of childcare service vouchers showed that, if the vouchers were considered equivalent to a cash transfer, the at-risk-of-poverty rate would decrease.
