to the consideration of the sixth periodic report

* The present report is being issued without formal editing.

Responses to the questions of the CEDAW Committee (CEDAW/C/YEM/6)

General

1. The answer to the general question on the process of preparing the report is that governmental and non-governmental institutions were involved in its preparation (see page 80 of the report).^{*} Those involved were trained in methods of compiling and analysing information and data for the purpose of preparing the report which was submitted to the Prime Minister/Chairman of the Supreme Council for Women and to ministers who were members of the Supreme Council, as well as to other government ministers. The report was not submitted to Parliament because that body had not been involved with the previous report.

Legislative and institutional framework

2. The Women's National Committee is the governmental body for women's affairs and was established in 1996. It is the consultative and executive organ of the Supreme Council for Women which is chaired by the Prime Minister. Its membership comprises seven ministers, prominent women in decision-making positions in the Government, the chairperson of the Committee and her deputy and the chairpersons of branches of the Committee in all the governorates, representatives of civil society and the private sector. In accordance with the resolution establishing it, it is the body responsible for drafting women's development policies, preparing studies and reports on the status of women, following up on delivery in the area of women's development, preparing proposals for legislation relating to women, arranging national public conferences, representing the Yemeni Government in matters relating to women at the national, regional and international levels. The National Committee's annual budget, for both the Committee itself and its branches, totals 70 million Yemeni rials (1 United States dollar is equal to 200 Yemeni rials). The actual Committee has a total of 50 officials of both genders as well as 71 women members in governmental departments (gender focal points), 57 in organizations of civil society together with 320 in the Committee's branches in the governorates.

3. The Supreme Council for Women is the supreme regulatory body; it adopts the policies proposed by the Women's National Committee and, in general, directs and supervises the work of the Committee. It has adopted the National Strategy for Women and also approved the draft legislative amendments which had been proposed by the legal group established by the Committee to study the laws from the point of view of their compliance with constitutional principles and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women. The Supreme Council adopts the plans and programmes of the Committee.

4. The committee composed of the Minister of Legal Affairs, the Minister of Human Rights and the Chairperson of the Women's National Committee reviewed the proposed legislative amendments in accordance with the attached matrix which specifies the name of the law being reviewed, the proposed substance of the amendments in terms of the legislative texts in force and the additions incorporated in the legislative texts to strengthen the legal rights of women, as shown in annex I. As for the expected timeline for completion of the work of this committee, it has already completed its work as it has studied in depth and discussed the proposed amendments, taking into account the opinion of all bodies involved in legal matters with a view to arriving at a final agreement that will be supportive of continuation of the procedures for adopting them and securing agreement on them. Comments have been exchanged on the substance of the proposals and we are pleased to transmit to you some examples of those comments. The committee took seven months to complete its work and submitted a final revised text of the draft amendments which is attached as annex III. The amendments were submitted for information and approval to the Cabinet by the Minister of Legal Affairs and the Chairperson of the Women's National Committee.

5. This is the procedure followed. However, proposed draft legislation is forwarded to the Ministry of Legal Affairs for redrafting with respect to legal language, terminology and content. That was done in the case of the draft amendments before they were returned to the Cabinet and forwarded by it to Parliament. There are currently 10 proposed laws.

6. The indirect means of seeking justice, in other words the appointment of a person to act as the woman's representative before the institutions of justice, involves recourse to a lawyer. Alternatively, certain organizations of civil society provide women with legal assistance but this service is limited since it is available only in two governorates.

7. Violence

Strategies and measures taken:

Tackling the problem of violence against women in Yemen, which takes many forms, has been clarified in major social research papers and studies which have necessitated the formulation strategies and the adoption of many measures. Perhaps one of the most important of these is the programme for ending violence against women which has been supported by Oxfam since 2001. The programme is implemented in cooperation with the Women's National Committee and with the support of a number of the organizations of civil society. On 8 May 2003 the Yemeni Network for Ending Violence against Women, consisting of 13 governmental and non-governmental organizations, was established. In 2003, in the framework of combating violence against women, the Women's National Committee carried out a comprehensive study on combating violence against women in Yemen. It convened a number of seminars and workshops and, at its initiative and in cooperation with its partners in the Shaima network, preparations were made for the first Yemeni Conference on Combating Violence against Women, which met in Sana'a from 4 to 7 March 2004. Studies were prepared on domestic violence and the 2003 family health survey was devoted to the phenomenon of domestic violence. Statistical data on the types, scale and impact of violence against women were submitted. Moreover, the 2007 survey of men and women gives a statistical picture dealing with the subject of violence and the section of the general five-year plan on the empowerment of women contained material concerning violence.

We reproduce below some tables from the 2007 statistical survey of women and men in Yemen relating to violence against women.

8. Marital rape is not known as a problem in Yemeni society: the issue is not discussed, women do not talk about it, instances are not reported and there is no such crime in the national legislation, whether in the Personal Status Act or any other law, perhaps because it has not appeared as a problem in need of legislative regulation. There is no specific legislation on violence within the family but the Penal Code does contain provisions on acts of violence, whether in the family or the community.

Trafficking in women and girls

9. The Supreme Council for Childhood and Motherhood is concerned about this matter and in its response to the comments made it referred to trafficking in women and girls. There are no data nor statistics on this matter, and the Council focused on the smuggling of children in general, taking as its starting point the basic principles of the Convention on the Rights of the Child. In this report, we clarify information on the paragraph in question and on what has been achieved by the Government of Yemen concerning this phenomenon.

10. From a review and analysis of reports coming from the reception centre in Harad and of the conclusions of the study made in 2004, it appears that about 90 per cent of the children smuggled are employed as labourers or are used in goods smuggling operations and that the remaining 10 per cent are exploited as beggars in Saudi Arabia. During the journey, the children are exposed to a number of adverse social and psychological influences and face a number of dangers either on the outward or the return journey, or while they are in nearby areas beyond the frontier, or when they return to their own areas. According to the reports from the reception centre in Harad, 862 children, all of them boys, were received by the centre having been transferred by the Saudi authorities between the time when they began work in May 2005 and August 2006. The corresponding figure for 2007 was 622 children — also all boys. These numbers give an indication of the extent of the awareness of the community, of the gravity of this phenomenon and of the problems to which children may be exposed as a result of smuggling. A large number of measures have been taken.

1. The Joint Technical Committee should be drawn from the Yemeni-Saudi Arabian Coordination Committee and represent the authorities concerned in those countries at the same level.
2. Periodic reports on efforts to combat child smuggling should be submitted to the Yemeni-Saudi Arabian Coordination Committee.
3. A list with the names and positions of participants on the Saudi Arabian side should be obtained sufficiently in advance of the meeting to identify their correspondence group.
4. The conclusions of the meeting should be presented to the Council of Ministers for the necessary guidance and coordination should take place with those concerned in the international cooperation sector within the Ministry of Planning and International Cooperation.
5. In case of any delay in signature of the memorandum of understanding, implementation of the joint study project should commence and the mechanism for handing over and receiving abducted children should be established, in view of its importance and the possibility that both could be implemented more effectively.

6. A national plan to combat child smuggling should be drafted with the cooperation of international experts in this domain. A workshop will be held to adopt and discuss the plan in mid-February 2008.

Studies

A field study on child smuggling, consisting of a case study of Hajjah and al-Mahwit governorates, was conducted in 2004.

Two discussion sessions were held on the findings of the study and discussed with all the governmental and civil authorities and international organizations concerned, as well as with the official, national and foreign media.

Various programmes and activities to eliminate child smuggling have been conducted in accordance with the programme of action between the Government and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) since 2005.

Information and outreach

A number of outreach activities and programmes have been and are being implemented by the Supreme Council, in coordination with the Ministry of Information, the Ministry of Social Affairs, the Ministry of Labour and the Ministry of Human Rights, as follows:

Communication and outreach strategy addressing the problem of child smuggling at all levels, local and national;

Discussions and outreach sessions on television and radio and in the press on child smuggling, its dangers and means of avoiding them;

Televised discussions;

Broadcast of programmes and messages continuously in Hajjah and on a quarterly basis in Sana'a;

Publication of a number of newspaper articles and reports;

Production of a documentary outreach film on the problem of child smuggling for use in outreach to schools, families and targeted local communities;

Outreach campaigns at the local level in targeted regions and districts;

Participation of children in campaigns to raise awareness of the problem in some districts;

Outreach workshop allowing children themselves to discuss child smuggling and design a poster, using children's drawings;

Efforts in coordination with Parliament to contribute to the elimination of child smuggling and obtain support and advocacy against child smuggling;

Issuance of publication with children's drawings, under the banner "No to violence, no to smuggling".

Legislative developments — security and judicial measures

Draft amendments to the laws related to the rights of the child have been prepared, bringing the legislation into line with the Convention on the Rights of the Child and international standards. Explicit amendments have been introduced to legal texts, criminalizing the smuggling of children and their exploitation for begging and sexual purposes and specifying penalties for perpetrators. A new, fourth chapter has been incorporated in the Penal Code, entitled “Crimes of child exploitation”.

Development and tightening up of security and judicial measures

The Ministry of the Interior has renewed monitoring and control measures at security points in cities adjacent to border areas; numerous attempts to smuggle children have been defeated before they reach the borders;

Children for re-evacuation are rounded up and issued with documentation and transferred to airports and border entry/exit points. In 2005, 510 children were transferred;

Stricter measures for the inclusion of children on the passports of adults have been introduced, in particular children from areas known for child smuggling. Prior to 2004, an average of 30 children were recorded annually; from 2005 to 2006, not a single case was recorded;

Ministry of the Interior offices handed over a number of persons accused of child smuggling to the Public Prosecutor and the courts. During 2004 and 2005, 94 such transfers were made;

Cases of child smuggling are dealt with on an urgent basis by the Public Prosecutor and the courts. A number of child smugglers have been sentenced to imprisonment for periods ranging from 6 months to 3 years. During 2005, there were 22 judgements against persons involved in child smuggling;

A consultation meeting was held during September 2006 in coordination with the Civil Affairs and Records Authority in order to discuss effective means of enhancing the births registration system and developing its mechanisms, thereby helping to eliminate the forging of the personal documents of children and smugglers.

Protection, psychological rehabilitation and reintegration of child victims of smuggling

A reception centre for smuggled children has been established at Harad and the necessary support, including furniture, equipment, staff and means of transport, has been provided;

A reception centre has been opened in the capital, Sana’a, for children returned via Sana’a international airport;

The centre runs a number of varied activities and programmes to assist and reintegrate smuggled children, by returning them to their governorates or their families;

The reception centre at Harad received support from the Al-Salih Foundation to enhance the effective participation of prominent civil society organizations involved in child protection programmes;

Child protection teams were created at the village level in the Aflah al-Sham district in Hajjah on an experimental basis, to be applied in other districts should it prove successful; a luxury sports centre for children was established in Aflah al-Sham and the necessary equipment and facilities were provided, in order to contribute to raising awareness among local children and retaining them in the district.

Training, retraining and capacity-building of personnel involved in combating child smuggling

Ongoing training is provided to personnel working in the Harad reception centre for smuggled children;

Two training sessions have been held for police officers at border points on dealing with cases of child smuggling (40 officers);

A training session is provided for directors of homes for smuggled juveniles and children on psychological support for child victims of smuggling;

Various training sessions on social and security issues are provided to personnel involved in combating child smuggling.

The Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child

Steps taken to secure approval of the Optional Protocol:

The Optional Protocol was submitted to the Ministry of the Interior and the Ministry of Defence for consideration, prior to being submitted to the Cabinet, which agreed to forward it to Parliament;

The Optional Protocol was submitted to Parliament for debate and approval. The Supreme Council for Motherhood and Childhood and the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labour contributed to the debate in the Parliamentary Committee on Human Rights and Public Freedoms;

Once the Optional Protocol was approved and ratified by Parliament, a Presidential Decree was issued.

Education and stereotyping

11. The Women's National Committee is taking the lead, together with some civil society organizations, in raising awareness in accordance with gender methodology of the roles and responsibilities of men and women and the fact that these roles vary in different times, places and cultures. As a result of the movement to educate girls and involve them in public life as employees or participants in community activities, particularly in cities, women have started to assume these traditionally male roles and men have started to support the reproductive role through caring for children, a role formerly but no longer confined to women. Moreover, the political leadership and participation roles that were previously monopolized by men are gradually becoming accepted for women. With regard to the revision of school textbooks and curricula, changes have been introduced in a number of core subjects, namely, Arabic language, science, social studies and Islamic education. Additions specific to women have been introduced such as maternal health in science, the feminine pronoun in Arabic language where the masculine pronoun was previously the most common, and women pioneers in social studies and Islamic education.

With regard to the lack of access by rural women to justice, the previous response indicated that problems and disputes are resolved by customary law. In cases where the matter is not resolved, women may resort to the courts. However, because of poverty and their inability to bear the costs of litigation, as well as customs and traditions, women do not resort to the courts.

12. The basic education strategy includes five components, each of which comprises a set of objectives. The first component, the achievement of justice and equality, includes the following objectives:

1. Increase admission and enrolment rates for basic education. Ministry of Education data taken from the Annual Report on the Implementation of the Basic Education Development Strategy show that the rate of admissions in first grade rose from 80 girls per 100 boys in 2005 to 83 girls per 100 boys in 2006, an increase of three percentage points.
2. Increase gross enrolment rates. The data for 2006 show that the enrolment rate of girls in basic education was 61.74 per cent, in comparison with 81.65 per cent for boys. In the same year, there were 2,095 special needs students, of whom 50.17 per cent were girls.
3. Spend efforts on comprehensive education. This objective comprised a set of measures, including support for the education of girls and poor pupils. The Government participated through the education for girls sector within the Ministry of Education, in addition to a group of donors including the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the German Agency for Technical Cooperation (GTZ), and the World Food Programme (WFP). Unfortunately, no consolidated statistics are available as each body publishes separate data.

The second component, quality improvement, comprised a set of measures, including the following:

- I. Research and studies. Research was conducted in 2006 into the reasons for school dropout among girls in secondary education, the training needs of primary school teachers, and criteria for effective school management;
- II. Training programmes. Training programmes targeted 90,254 male and female teachers. Women represented 19.07 per cent of total participants and for every male trainee there were 23 female trainees;
- III. Quality improvement through the comprehensive development of education. The overall plan of the Ministry for 2007 was implemented in accordance with the budget on the basis of the following programmes: family incentives; infrastructure; development of administration at the school level; teacher development; teaching materials development. Moreover, a ministerial decision was issued on the establishment of a special committee for the review and development of the Public Education Act.

IV. School curricula.

1. Analysed the humanities curricula in basic and secondary education, in the light of the areas covered by the population education project;

2. Participated in compiling an in-service training manual for teachers working in basic and secondary education;

3. Prepared experimental tools for teachers' manuals in kindergartens and supervised their application.

V. Measurement and assessment. There were numerous accomplishments in respect of measurement and assessment, including continued work on construction of the Measurement and Assessment Centre and the provision of furniture and equipment necessary for monitoring educational achievement. In 2005-2006, the Educational Research and Development Centre conducted the second survey on competency in core skills in basic education and prepared the general report, which was launched at a special workshop.

The Ministry focused on the third component, institution-building, through the following:

I. Training sessions and participation in conferences and workshops abroad (international, regional)

Item	Type of event	Number			Women (percentage of total)
		Events	Participants
			Men	Women
Workshops and seminars	Abroad	11	2 149	1 480	40.8
	National	25	43	4	8.5
Subtotal		143	2 192	143	40.4
Abroad	Sessions	24	50	1	2
	Seminars	30	48	1	9.5
	Conferences	39	84	14	14.3
Total		236	2 374	1 503	39.6

It is clear from the above table that:

The highest percentage of female participation was 40.8 per cent in the workshops abroad, with 8.5 per cent in the national workshops, 2 per cent in the training sessions abroad, 9.5 per cent in the seminars and 14.3 per cent in the conferences abroad. This demonstrates the importance attached by the Ministry to women's participation in the education sector, which encourages girls' education.

II. Support for the Ministry's professional capacity

The following have been implemented:

1. A comprehensive survey of data on education for the 2005-2006 academic year;
2. Phase 2 of the wages and salaries strategy;
3. Continued preparation of the secondary education strategy.

Fourth component: improving internal capacity

This is to be done by establishing more schools, improving the quality of education and increasing financial resources.

Fifth component: activities of the Illiteracy Eradication and Adult Education Organization

The Illiteracy Eradication and Adult Education Organization has implemented several activities recently, of which the most notable are:

Enrolment in illiteracy eradication classes: rates of female enrolment in illiteracy eradication and adult education programmes have risen to 87 per cent, as opposed to 13 per cent for men in the year 2006.

Enrolment in basic skills and women's training centres: women's enrolment has reached a total of 7,983 trainees.

1. Human capacity-building: Training has been conducted for 180 male and female supervisors, including 150 from the governorates, as well as for 1,176 male and female teachers.

Training has been conducted for 180 staff members of the Organization and its branches in the governorates.

A training session has been held for 145 directors of the training divisions.

2. Curricula for illiteracy eradication and adult education programmes: 10 textbooks have been designed for the basic and follow-up stages, entitled “Our Public Life”, “Our Economic Life”, “Our Social Life”, “Our Health Life”, as well as four educational guides for male and female teachers.

With regard to training and qualification programmes, 11 textbooks have been produced in accordance with the particular skills of men and women.

3. The media have implemented the following activities:
 - Celebration of International Literacy and Adult Education Day on 8 January;
 - Publication of an information booklet on illiteracy eradication and adult education activities;
 - Dissemination of posters addressing the problem of illiteracy;
 - Six television spots on the illiteracy problem, and five new ones;
 - Daily reminders about the dangers of illiteracy in the two official newspapers (al-Thawrah and 26 September).
4. Meetings and conferences:
 - Regional seminar on Koranic schools with the support of UNESCO;
 - Regional seminar on illiteracy in Middle Eastern States;
 - Seminar on the problems of illiteracy eradication funding, with the support of the Islamic Organization.

Participation in political and public life and representation at the international level

14. Regarding the issue of women’s morality:

Issues of morality are unrelated to any rise or decline in women’s participation in political life. The decline in women’s participation in general is due to:

- Lack of men’s acceptance of women in decision-making positions (elected bodies);
- The flawed notion that politics is a male arena, which has played a role in the exclusion of women from political life;
- Lack of a binding law reflective of a firm political will to establish a quota for women in elective bodies. There are only “gentlemen’s agreements” among the political parties in that regard, which some parties do not abide by during elections;

- Women are subjected to pressures during elections that lead to their failure. Those pressures can come from their families or relatives or even from society.

15. The Women's National Committee proposed the creation of the Coordination Committee on 27 September 2005 at a special meeting held with the political parties and civil society organizations concerned with women's participation in political life. The Committee was formed on the basis of one of the recommendations made at that meeting. The Women's National Committee proposed that the membership of the Coordination Committee should comprise the Women's National Committee and all political parties and civil society organizations that had participated in the meeting inasmuch as the purpose of the Committee was to support women candidates in order to ensure their representation in elected bodies. The Committee was unable to become fully effective because it lacked the support it required in order to implement its plans. Only one programme was undertaken for Committee members. That programme, on the political empowerment of women, included some Committee members and was carried out under the supervision of the Women's Bureau in the Supreme Commission for Elections.

The Women's Bureau is a new office within the Supreme Commission and was established in 2003. The Bureau solicits support for the implementation of political programmes for women. It is concerned with all matters that are relevant to women in political life and has implemented a number of political programmes for women candidates and voters.

16. The proposal of the Women's National Committee to amend legislation covering the Foreign Service is still being debated in Parliament. Please refer to the table below for information on the number of women appointed to posts of responsibility in the public administration, as compared to men.

17. In respect of citizenship, article 15 bis has been amended. That article provided that, in the case of a Yemeni woman married to a foreigner who has left her to care for the children she had borne him or where the woman has become responsible for supporting those children as result of the husband's death, insanity or absence or his ceasing to reside with them for a period of at least one year, those children will be treated as Yemenis in all respects, so long as they remain with their mother until they attain the age of majority. Those who have attained the age of majority have the right to acquire either Yemeni citizenship or the citizenship of their father's country.

18. The proposal to amend article 14 of Executive Charter 47 (1991) was rejected because that charter is an implementing regulation and not a law. As such, it must be amended by the Prime Minister.

The draft had also proposed increasing the residency requirement for alien husbands from two years to five years. However, the legal team did not propose an article that would allow a Yemeni woman to transmit her citizenship to her alien husband.

19. Although the law is clear, it has not been implemented because women are unaware of this right that is granted to them under the Labour Code and employers have not been asked to provide these facilities. Moreover, as most businesses do not employ large numbers of women, the law does not apply to them. The Directorate-General for Working Women of the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labour will implement an awareness-raising programme on the rights of working women in a number of Governmental and non-governmental agencies.

20. The current five-year plan has set an annual target rate of 5 per cent for working women.

Health

21. Among the goals of the Population Working Programme were to:

- Decrease maternal mortality and morbidity by at least 5 per cent;
- Decrease infant mortality to 55 deaths per 1,000 live births;
- Decrease the under-5 mortality rate to approximately 74 per 1,000 live births.

A number of measures have been taken in order to implement the Population Working Programme, as shown in the following tables:

Section II, article 5 of the safe motherhood project, on the protection of women prior to marriage, prohibits all forms of female genital mutilation and prohibits individuals as well as health facilities and those working in such facilities from doing so, under threat of punishment. Parliament will debate the project in February, according to a member of the health and population committee of Parliament. That member also said that the project was on the agenda of Parliament for the current session.

22. No detailed, current information is available on female circumcision in Yemen and there are no new studies; the old study dates from 1999.

The draft law on female circumcision proposed by the Supreme Council for Childhood prohibits female circumcision and considers it an assault on the physical integrity of the body falling under the provisions of the Penal Code. Studies on domestic violence have been prepared.

23. The Government still does not have sufficient data on disabled women, particularly those in rural areas. Efforts in this regard have been limited in relation to the extent of the problem.

Marriage and family relations

24. The Women's National Committee pressed hard to have this article removed from the Penal Code. However, the legal team's draft amendments proposed a lesser penalty, commensurate with that imposed on men, for women who commit the same offence.

25. A number of amendments to the Personal Status Law were proposed, in particular with regard to polygamy, divorce, testimony and inheritance, which are governed by the Islamic sharia.

26. Despite the sound legal basis of such marriages, studies have proven that they are fragile and short-lived. The relevant authorities, in particular the Ministry of the Interior, have attempted to curb this type of marriage in order to protect the rights of Yemeni girls by requesting approval from the diplomatic missions of the countries of the prospective husbands. In addition, civil society organizations have implemented a number of awareness-raising activities on the negative effects of such marriages.

27. The Women's National Committee and the Supreme Council for Motherhood and Childhood proposed that the age of marriage be changed. The proposal was approved by the Ministry of Legal Affairs, forwarded to the Cabinet and then on to Parliament, where it is being discussed by a specialized committee of Parliament prior to its submission during the current session.

28. Efforts to ratify the Optional Protocol have been unsuccessful. However, the Women's National Committee and its civil society partners will continue their efforts to have the Optional Protocol ratified.
